WOMAN'S WORLD

Intelligence, Artistry Helps Set Dining Table Attractively

By Ertta Haley

Just once in your life, you have set an attractive table, know that you are never content to sit down to one which shows no imagination or beauty. A simple, everyday meals or something special when you are served on a well-appointed table.

The average homemaker must set the table many and almost endless times during her career as the head of her household. If it can mean fun for her and enjoyment for the family, then this task becomes less of a chore and more of a hobby.

Each woman's family deserves the very best, and especially in the matter of table setting, for here are the ones who sit down with us most often. Practice your art every day with every meal, and if it's only a tray lunch for yourself at noon, and table setting there is little excuse.

Consider your table as carefully as a picture when you're setting it. Start with a few well chosen items, and add to them as your skill and interest increase. With simple and inexpensive accessories you can create tables that are interesting and as well as important to the scene of dining.

Your gathering china, glass, silverware and linens for the table, have some idea of what you want, and have that motif in mind so that the pieces will be related. Table accessories should harmonize with whatever period predominates in your home. This does not mean that each exactly your furnishings, but at least have them in the same spirit and feeling so there is no lack of harmony present.

Sturdy Table

Whether these youngsters play games, do clay modeling or coloring, they need have no fear of harming the many layered plastic table top that resists heat, beverages or scratches. Tubular steel legs hold up against vigorous activities. A leaf added to this extendable table makes it a dinette set which will serve six people adequately.

Use plain glass with it, so the dinnerware will stand out. Or, if you have ornate glassware, combine it with plain dinnerware. Two ornate things together will give you too busy, as well as too restless an atmosphere.

Do you have a cloth handed down from grandmother or great grandmother for special occasions? Display it to best advantage by keeping china and glassware simple. Let the cloth tell its own story, and without interruption.

Rich and very heavy silverware should be allowed to stand out in all its beauty: set it on an unpatterned table cloth, and combine with plain, or at the most, banded dinnerware and plain glass.

There should be a consistency of quality in everything which you use on your table. Though both silverware and china cannot be elaborate in design, their quality and craftsmanship can and should match if they're going to be used together, or one will show off to disadvantage.

Take a tea table, for instance. You would not use delicate tea cups and nice silverware with inexpensive cotton napkins, would you? You do not have to be an expert to know that these just would not go together. The same holds true of whatever kind of table you set.

If you are just starting out and cannot afford fine and expensive table accessories, you can still have good taste and effective tables.

Those whose budget permits only pottery and textured cotton doilies or cloths will find that the luscious colors and good design can lend a dramatic touch that is just as effective in its way as more expensive accessories.

Build Perfect Settings Piece by Piece

In buying glassware, you might start with a small plate seven or eight inches in diameter to use for both desserts and salads. Next choose water tumblers with or without a foot, whatever is in keeping with your taste and style of home.

Long-stemmed, hand-blown crystal is considered formal, while low short-stemmed glasses are equally good in taste. Some of the formal modern patterns have low-slug lines.

If you cannot buy a great variety, remember that finger bowls can be used for dessert or for holding small flowers and cigarettes; ash trays double as candle holders; vases double as book ends.

When choosing things for dining, have place settings put together for you, using glass, silver and china so that you can study the effect. In this way you can correlate table appointments for the sake of harmony.

You may not always want to use your best glassware and china for the simpler meals, but silverware can and should be used, as it gains beauty through use. Select breakfast settings that will go with it.

Decorative Arrangements Need to be Simple

You will often like some decoration for tables, be these flowers, figurines or a combination. These should be low and simple. You do not want to detract from the beauty of the other things.

Flowers should always be real, as anything else is an imitation of the real thing, and imitation is just not in good taste. Few flowers are often better than many and you'll find that birds and figures often make flowers go a long way.

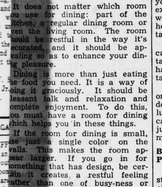
There is so much available in the decorative line. A simple green plant in an attractive tureen, bowl, arrangements of birds on a mirror, or carved woods or ceramic figures, all these can be used effectively.

Tastefully Set Tables Use Decorating Principles

Just as you decorate a room properly, you will set your table. These are time-tested principles and you'll want to apply them for good taste as well as good sense.

For example, if you have strong, dominantly-figured dinnerware, it should have a plain background.

Set every table dramatically . . .



and give the family your best.

which you need. You can always add more, as you get the room as well as the money with which to purchase extra furnishings.

Keep accessories to a minimum. It's poor taste to display much of your dishes, glassware or even silverware. Only those pieces which are functional and decorative should be displayed on shelves or glassed cupboards.

A. H. S. Newscast

Hi, Guys and Gals!

Is everybody ready for that long awaited Easter holiday? I know all the girls have gotten their Easter bonnets and are ready for the Easter parade. We will be out of school Friday and Monday.

The Senior play, "Who's Crazy Now?" is ready for presentation tonight, Thursday. It is a comedy that won't let you stop laughing. Before you leave you will be wondering who's crazy. The play will also be given Thursday afternoon to the student body.

The Carol Choir, which is made up of A. H. S. girls, gave a cantata at the Baptist Church last Sunday night. They did such a splendid job that I wanted to take this opportunity to congratulate the members and their director. It is hoped that the cantata will be presented to the students in the near future.

Tuesday morning there was a movie, "Tulsa," shown in the auditorium. The student body saw the film and the proceeds went to the office fund.

Mrs. Payne's homeroom had charge of assembly Wednesday morning. The guest speaker was Senator C. T. Moses. It was the first time Senator Moses has spoken to us this year. Everyone enjoyed his talk and we hope he will visit us again.

The Senior Tri-Hi-Y held its regular meeting Monday. The monthly social was observed with the Hi-Y Club also participating. Dr. Twyman Williams, one of the club sponsors, spoke a few words about the work of the club.

The baseball team played its first home game last week. Our boys won 8 to 2 over Dan River. They have now won two straight games.

I've covered all of the news this week, but I'll see you again next week, same time, same place.
